

Debunking Your Ability to be Evil

(no matter who makes the statement)

By Toni Petrinovich

How long do you take to make a decision? Is it a few years to decide on what college to attend or maybe six months to buy a car? How much time to do you give to allowing someone to enter the sacred realm of your soul? Or even your psyche for that matter? You came into this world to follow your bliss; do you pay attention to your intention?

If you have been searching in any way at all for someone to do a psychic reading for you (which is much different than a soul reading) or have even considered talking with someone who says they can tell you about yourself, you know that there are thousands of readers "out there". Some of them have some very admirable qualities. Others are simply out for your dollar. Most likely, you are looking for ways to go beyond your perceived human barriers. So, I will ask the question again, "How long do you take to make the decision about who is going to enter your inner domain?"

My desire to address this subject is based upon the number of people who come to me for a reading after being told they are too evil, dangerous and/or powerful, etc. to be read for by some other person. To put it bluntly, this is ridiculous. Your experience of life belongs to you. To those of you who have been told anything close to this in any way, I say, "Don't wear another person's skin". Anyone who sees you as evil, dangerous or too powerful is seeing you through their personal filtering system – a frame of reference for how they see the world.

One of the pitfalls of looking outside of yourself for confirmation of that which you already know (and you do know) is that anyone you seek out has an opportunity to play out their own story within your drama. Since we are each a standing wave (transmitting and receiving) simultaneously, you only experience that which you are transmitting and so do they. Acceptance of yourself exactly as you are is the point of departure for an acceptable, meaningful effort at self-transformation.

Obviously, this is a two way street. You send out fear about what they are going to find out about you in the reading or you transmit your inner confusion; they receive your fear through their filters bringing up their fear (filters) and they transmit that back to you. Most of the people doing psychic readings do not even know they are doing this. They actually believe what they are saying to you. It's up to you whether you are going to allow this to affect your life or not. Actually, this might be a good spot to ask yourself why you are asking them the questions you bring to them in the first place.

I would like to add right here that reading your soul is completely different than reading the astral/psychic realm of your vibrations. Your soul knows no time, judgment or condition. It simply is and within that realm is only beneficence and love. The astral/psychic realm is the noosphere in which live all of the emotions and thoughts of humanity. It is constantly changing and moving contributing new information to the Whole in every way. I will leave that to your imagination.

I am including here all people who tell you that they are too sensitive to be around you as though it is your fault. Their thin boundaries do not make you wrong, dangerous or evil. It simply means that the person who feels his or herself too sensitive is having a hard time aligning with this dimension. It is their personal "MacGuffin" and has nothing to do with you. Don't take it on!

If someone promises to show you a door to another world, take you to places you have never been or uses some "come on" to draw you in, take some time to research their beliefs, what other people experience around them and ask yourself how committed you are to doing the work that is required to visit other dimensions of existence. Each of us is inherently capable of multi-dimensional travel, direct knowing and all of the clair-sensory powers that others might talk about to make them look special. Don't give your power away. If it is not a shared experience, if the person is acting like a guru, it is not for you (you already know this). Humanity is not unfolding solitarily. Everyone transmits and receives within this environment assisting each other.

The human being is beginning to understand and realize what it is – God in form. This means that the human heart is taking the driver's seat in life – driving not only the physical body, also the personal desires of daily life. This opens the door to unlimited possibility. As Source you are unlimited possibility. Now you are beginning to know it. Embrace this unlimited knowing. Be vivacious within it!

Act in that knowing by using your sacred discernment in determining who and what you are going to allow into your life. If someone says you "should" do something or "shouldn't" be a certain way, you immediately know they are attempting to foist their belief system upon you. If they tell you that you scare them, affect them adversely or are too powerful, know that they are projecting upon you that which they fear in themselves. It is all a loop within a mirror.

Do not own that which belongs to other people – and that includes anyone who tells you that they have information from other dimensions for you. I am 64 years old and have been doing readings for over 40 years. I have never, I iterate – never – met a person or entity that was evil, too dangerous or too powerful. We see what we are. Be Source; be compassion; be love – then, that is all that you will see and your inner door will open ~ wide!
